whether she's injecting filler or lecturing at the University of Louisville, Dr. Tami Buss Cassis never loses sight of why she wanted to become a dermatologist. "There is no greater satisfaction than diagnosing and successfully treating my patients' dermatologic needs whether they're cosmetic, medical or surgical," she says. "We don't target one specific group—we see the whole family and treat the full spectrum—it's a real 'open arms' policy." Procedures that improve the body have also become popular among her patients. "CoolSculpting, which uses controlled freezing to remove fat cells in certain areas, is one of our most popular procedures."
